ABOUT

Abhilasha Gulhane is a visual artist based in the Bay Area. Her current series, Human Mind and Technology Ecosystem (2026), uses white acrylic line on deep burgundy and navy grounds to map thought, attention, circuitry, and living systems as one geometry. The mark comes from Maharashtra wall painting: a spare, rhythmic line language she treats as a tool for describing the mind, not as a folk story. Heads become circuit cities. Data becomes current. Pattern becomes a way of seeing inner and outer worlds at the same scale. She holds Grade A in the Elementary (2007) and Intermediate (2009) Drawing Grade Examinations — government-certified art tests of the Maharashtra State Board of Art Education. She has painted since childhood, moving from pencil and watercolor into acrylic in 2015. Selected work, 2026.

ARTIST STATEMENT

I paint the mind as a system: attention, circuitry, and living networks sharing one geometry.

White acrylic line on burgundy and navy is how thought becomes visible — inner weather mapped onto the same structures that run technology and collective life.

The line language is drawn from Maharashtra wall painting; the subject is contemporary consciousness, not folk narrative.

In Human Mind and Technology Ecosystem (2026), heads become circuit cities, data becomes current, and pattern becomes a way of seeing.

The work asks whether thought, economy, and ecology are separate domains, or one field drawn at different scales.
