

ABHILASHA GULHANE

PORTFOLIO 2026

Visual Artist • Climate & Energy Researcher
Bay Area, California

Exploring stillness, humans, geometry & nature through technology and economics

Inspired by traditional Indian wall painting from Maharashtra, India

abhilashagulhane111@gmail.com | +1 650 602 8740

Instagram: @abhilasha.sfart

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Abhilasha Gulhane is a Bay Area-based visual artist and climate & energy researcher who bridges technology with the poetic language of traditional Indian folk art. With a natural affinity for both analytical thinking and creativity—gifts inherited from her mother and grandmother—Abhilasha began painting at the age of five. Her grandmother carried forward the living tradition of painting on the walls of their home in India.

Formally trained, she earned distinction in advanced drawing from the Maharashtra State Board of Art Education, India. She began with pencils and watercolors, exploring humans and nature. In 2015, acrylic and oil painting opened new dimensions. Today she creates powerful acrylic abstracts exploring stillness, humans, geometry, and nature—deeply influenced by traditional Indian wall painting from Maharashtra.

Traditional ritual paintings in this style are created on the inside walls of village huts. The walls are made of branches, earth, and red brick, giving a red ochre background. Artists paint using only white pigment made from rice flour and water, with gum as a binder. These simple materials produce profound geometric expressions of life, community, and nature.

Abhilasha has evolved this heritage through extensive travel across twenty states in India, as well as journeys to Egypt and Albuquerque, New Mexico. She observed striking similarities in geometric patterns and humanity's relationship with nature across cultures. Her work explores how technology and economics shape our inner and outer worlds—revealing the invisible connections that bind us all.

ARTIST STATEMENT

My art bridges technology and economics with the poetic, rhythmic geometries of traditional Indian folk painting from Maharashtra. My grandmother painted on the walls of our home using rice paste on earth and brick. That living tradition lives in my practice today. I explore stillness, humans, geometry, and nature. Through rhythmic white linework, I investigate how technology shapes our inner and outer worlds—how economic systems flow like rivers, how communities form patterns, and how ancient wisdom still speaks to modern life. Extensive travel across India, Egypt, and Native American lands revealed to me the same geometric patterns repeating across cultures—the same circles, triangles, and spirals that speak of balance and connection. My work is an invitation to see these invisible threads that connect technology, economy, and the human spirit.

— Abhilasha Gulhane

The Loom of Life

Medium: Acrylic on canvas, large format (approx. 36 × 48 in)

Description: This intricate composition weaves village life—houses, boats, fish, and geometric symbols—with an ornate central form that merges sacred Warli chauk motifs and the folded architecture of the human brain. White linework on deep burgundy evokes the interconnected threads of community, economy, and cognition, honoring Warli's celebration of daily existence while illuminating modern systemic complexity.

The Collective Current

Medium: Acrylic on canvas, large format (approx. 30 × 45 in)

Description: A majestic fish, its body alive with Warli-inspired geometric patterns, moves through a sea that transitions from earth to sky. Above it, a cloud-brain formation blooms with symbolic motifs, suggesting collective mind and shared intelligence. The work explores flow— of ideas, economies, and communities—rooted in the organic geometries of traditional Warli yet speaking directly to contemporary systems thinking.

Trilogy of Consciousness

Medium: Acrylic on canvas, triptych (approx. 48 × 48 in overall)

Description: This powerful triptych traces the architecture of awareness across three panels: the cosmic eye and sacred triangle of perception; the branching, cloud-crowned tree of growth and communal bonds; and the radiant face of selfhood, its mind mapped with intricate patterns. Each panel pulses with Warli's geometric heartbeat, reimagined as a journey from individual insight to collective wisdom and back again.

The Seer (Devi of Patterns)

Medium: Acrylic on canvas, large format (approx. 30 × 42 in)

Description: A commanding female figure gazes outward with a single, focused eye containing a sacred triangle. Her elaborate headdress radiates like thought itself—Warli patterns transformed into a crown of connections. The rhythmic linework around her celebrates the feminine divine and the weaving of social and economic tapestries, inviting contemplation of intuition, community, and the power of patterned thought.

Thank You

For inquiries, commissions, or exhibitions

Abhilasha Gulhane

Bay Area, California

abhilasha.gulhane@proton.me

Modern Warli • Acrylic Abstracts • Complexity of Mind & Society